

ABSTRACT

Briefly, in accordance with one embodiment of the invention, a differential digital-to-analog converter utilized in a transmitter path of a transceiver utilizes a differential R2R architecture. Such a differential digital-to-analog converter may be utilized in higher speed, lower power and higher resolution applications with a higher area efficiency, for example in a WCDMA application.